Eerie. Elusive. Enigmatic. Haunting the spatial crossroads between dimensional doorways, the ethereal enchantress Wisp summons strange apparitions from beyond the breach.
Sever her soul to escape death, steal the sight from enemy eyes, and vaporize all before the blaze of our celestial light. Wisp materialized in

Notes

- If Wisp wields her signature Fulmin, the weapon's Alternate Fire mode-switching animation is reduced from 1 second to 0.5 seconds.

Trivia

- Wisp was first mentioned in Devstream 115 along with 2 other unnamed Warframes, and was mentioned again in Devstream 122 along with Hildryn.
- Wisp is the first Warframe design with no feet on her model; as a result, she floats above ground constantly, leaning to the direction of movement or floating upright when stationary.
 - As mentioned by Geoff Crookes in Devstream 123, Wisp is the first Warframe to have completely unique walking, sprinting, and hard landing animations and, like Hildryn and Limbo before her, has unique rolling animations as well.
 - However, Wisp still uses default animations (walking, running, and standing on her nonexistent "feet") when crouching, aiming her gun, wielding an Archgun in ground combat, or extracting from a mission.
- Wisp is the 40th Warframe to be released (excluding Primed and Umbra variants).

- Wisp's theme is based around Will-o'-Wisps, otherworldly apparitions mentioned in varying folklore. They are most commonly described as a fiery light that would distract and lure unwary travelers off paths to their demise.
- Wisp is one of the few Warframes whose main blueprint is dropped as loot reward, others being Khora and Ivara.
 - Wisp is also the first Warframe whose main blueprint is dropped from a boss, namely Ropalolyst.
- Wisp is the first Warframe to require Hexenon to build.
