anymore, so I made a build to share. Essentially, [Dex Pixia] is a primer, and [Condition Overload] does all the work. Get in a few swings while [Dex Pixia] recharges, or tear acolytes and other bulky enemies to pieces.

If you don't care about razorflies, use this one. My builds can be swapped for one another at any time. The main idea is to add a little bit of damage while [Dex Pixia] is reloading. [Dex Pixia] works as a very good primer in this case, though really it's an unimpressive weapon either way. Specific enemies like Acolytes take massive damage from it, though. You can armour strip enemies very slowly with [Shattering Impact], so do with that what you will.

I can't say it enough, so I'll say it again. Don't spend an umbral forma for this weapon unless you really love [Titania] and have a massive oversupply. If you really want to do it anyway, you can run this build with a fully upgraded [Shocking Touch] and [Gladiator Might] and save one regular forma, or spend an extra forma to optionally add Focused Defence. (No other exilus mods do anything.)
