The System shall change. No more clutching at sunk costs, imposed ideals, hand-me-down hopes. No, we are better than that. The Corpus shall know a violent restructuring, but with time enough to face the impending threat from Tau with renewed and absolute vigor.

Or not. Perhaps the rot is too deep. Perhaps the father should abandon his children. Perhaps it is time for a new philosophy.

Life's just a bargain like any other. Yours is no different. Would you like a seat at my new table? Perhaps with your... masked friends alongside? The Business, was it? A curious name. And Eudico too, of course. All people who know what they want.

Unlike the current-era Corpus, most notably Nef Anyo, who have achieved their wealth through slothful means, Parvos Granum is a cold, calculating, and intelligent individual who values hard work and will actively take steps and measures to achieve his goals. "Fulfill desire and others will follow."

"Ours is the grasping golden hand. We are desire. We are Corpus."

—The Tenets

Parvos Granum grew up during the height of the Orokin era, together with his brother Cladius, who he admired for his physical strength while being frustrated with his naiveté and lack of ambition, occasionally imagining he had a clever sister instead. They lived with their father on a small farm as grain farmers, the same as dozens of generations of their family before them. After years and years of back-breaking manual labor, one-day Parvos left for the nearby Orokin city. He was awestruck by the decadent splendor of their gem-encrusted gold and ivory architecture, flaunting their wealth accrued through their greed upon the simple living people like himself and his family. As he shouted "I take what I am owed!" he ripped a handful of Rubedo jewels from the gates and tried to run, but was promptly caught by the Orokin servants which dragged him to the town square. As punishment for theft, his left hand was cut off with a plasma gutter but while the gathered crowd cheered he managed to swallow one of the any man of lesser conviction, and that the single stone was worth more than ten generations' farm work.

The next day Parvos returned to the city, pawning the gem for a financial loan. His newfound wealth in hand he then loaned parts of it to other poor folk like him, who desired more of their life. With each new investment or associate, Parvos taught each one of them his philosophy of the evils of contentment and idleness as well the gift of Desire, while his partners themselves went on to further loan their money to others and spread his teachings, gathering more followers with each transaction.

In time his fortune had multiplied exponentially and he commissioned a golden prosthesis for his missing left hand.

One day during his journeys news reached him that his father had finally collapsed under the toiling farm work. Parvos rushed back to his home to find his father had already died.

Committed to ending the history of his family's brutal and extorted labor, he gave the order to flatten and demolish the farmstead and the surrounding fields, despite Cladius' protests. In their place, he erected a new city of the future called "Corposium", where even the smallest of men would be welcome to apply his wit and desire to make his own wealth.

Specter Particle Theory

Some doors ought to remain closed? That's not in my world view. Fire. Fusion. Void. Progress always comes entangled with risk, with violence. With the precious sample obtained, development is accelerating. The Entrati have kept their secrets long enough.

I am calling it the Specter Particle. As my Archimedian explains, mimicry is in its nature. An echo. Exposed to precept circuits, we are able to imprint behaviors! Like an infant mirroring her surrogate. Only this infant can set the world on fire.

One of Parvos Granum's accomplishments was the creation of the Specter Particle Theory which would set the foundation for Specter technology that enables the imprinting of rudimentary behavior into bodies.

Protea and Disappearance

At last. Esteemed Parvos. Tell me what you desire and we shall furnish you.

My desire is well known to you. Assemble what I have designed, and I shall be on my way.

Potent weaponry, exquisite anatomy, those are trivial. But temporal manipulation? Even the Entrati-

The Entrati have violated time, and I have violated them.

What shall we name her then - this child of two fathers?

Protea.

—Ballas and Parvos Granum on Protea Prime

Having acquired the Entrati's research into time, Parvos Granum conceived the designs for the Protea Warframe to serve as his bodyguard. As part of an undisclosed deal, Ballas obliged into creating the time-manipulating "child of two fathers."

Granum was later betrayed by the Corpus Board of Directors, whose assassins sabotaged his transport's Void drive. However, he was saved by Protea's time powers, but this resulted him being trapped within a part of the Void which would later be known as the Granum Void.

oval of Nef Anyo's actions in the Corpus.

As the Corpus Board of Directors continuously reach a voting impasse, Nef Anyo invokes The Deadlock Protocol, a contingency initiative to instate a successor to the Founder. Nef Anyo makes the claim that he himself is the genetic heir which, if true, would give him total control over the Board. He intends to prove this by searching for traces of Protea, using Solaris workers as a sacrifice for Void-temporal jumps to reach the Granum Void.

In an effort to thwart Nef Anyo's plans, the Tenno aids Solaris United and gets to the Granum Void before Nef Anyo's henchmen do. There, they discover that Parvos Granum had survived from Protea's sacrifice by trapping them in a temporal prison, at the cost of Protea becoming a Specter of herself. The Warframe Specter becomes hostile and sends its Errant Specters throughout Nef Anyo's fleet; Parvos Granum does not deny Nef Anyo being his son but is disgusted with his twisted and slothful methods within the Corpus, stating he simply used him to summon the Tenno to reignite Protea into action.

Angered by this deception and the threat of the Protea Specter, Nef Anyo calls truce with Solaris United and delivers the Tenno the blueprint to the Xoris, a glaive fashioned with Parvos Granum's Specter Particle Theory. Seeing Parvos Granum's high intelligence being a threat, Solaris United reluctantly accept the weapon. However, as the Errant Specters overrun Nef Anyo's fleet, he quickly breaks the truce and decides to self-destruct his ships. The Tenno jump into Granum Void once more and use the Xoris to save the trapped Solaris workers, and Parvos uses the chance to escape to real-space. He remarks dryly that the destruction of Anyo's fleet has left the Tenno trapped in the Void with the Protea Specter, but wishes them a polite goodbye during their final battle.

In the aftermath, Parvos Granum is unfazed by the defeat of the Protea Specter, sending the Tenno an inbox message stating he intends to restructure the Corpus to counter the impending threat from Tau. Otherwise, he will abandon his children to create a new doctrine, inviting the Tenno and Solaris United a seat next to him.

Seeking to fulfill his desire of having a reliable sister, Parvos Granum recruits Candidates to rise above the masses and become his Sister, providing them Hound companions, Warframe Specter guardians, and latent technological weapons in the form of Tenet weaponry. Vala Glarios serves as his right-hand woman, overseeing the growth of the Sisters.

Angels of the Zariman

After The New War, the long-lost Orokin colony ship Zariman Ten Zero reappeared from the Void. Immediately, both Parvos Granum and the Grineer Worm Queen sent their loyal subordinates to claim the legendary vessel in their name. Power aboard the Zariman periodically shifts in either side's favor as both the Tenno and the beings now inhabiting the ship strike back at them to protect their home.

- The name can also mean "small seed", possibly alluding to his philosophy's role as the origin of the Corpus. Either translation also sheds further light into the naming of the Black Seed group.
- Granum once tried to hire Cavalero as an enforcer, who flatly refused his offer.
- Parvos Granum narrates the trailer for Protea Prime alongside Ballas, and is the first and currently only one to have someone other than Ballas as a narrator.
