altered in Update 19.0 (2016-11-11) to reflect the current game's order. This story was altered.

General

Alad V was a member of the Corpus Board of Directors and the head of Grineer Relations. In spite of his position, Alad showed a particular contempt towards the Grineer (whom he refers to as 'dogs') and to a lesser extent, the Tenno. Over the course of his career, Alad would develop an obsession with the Tenno and (later on) the Infested and the Sentient, believing that he could harness their power for his own benefit.

Operation Sling-Stone

During one set of negotiations, the Twin Queens demanded that Alad reduce the price of some materials after several stockpiles were discovered, threatening to unleash a Fomorian-class 'supership' if he refused. Alad decided this was a bluff, unaware that these Fomorian ships did exist. When he realized his mistake, he turned to the Tenno for assistance.

Although the Lotus did not want to play any part in the conflict, the threat of Grineer power expanding convinced her to reconsider Alad's plea. This resulted in Operation Sling-Stone, where the Tenno would sabotage the Fomorians' reactors by corrupting them with Infested material. Eventually the last of these ships fell and the Grineer withdrew, although Alad dispatched scouts to Pluto in response to rumors of surviving ships.

Operation: Arid Fear

Ultimately, the Queens agreed to Alad's initial contract, but decided to pay more than what he asked for in exchange for his assistance; the Grineer had several unknown settlements that they wanted to hide from the Tenno. Knowing that the Tenno are aware of their methods via their capture missions, Alad decided to send his scouts and navigators to The Void, in the hopes of hiding the information as long as he could. Despite this, the Lotus discovered his covert operations (in what became Operation: Arid Fear) and sent the Tenno to hunt down his scouts. Despite Alad's best efforts, the Tenno recovered the information and were able to find the settlements' planet (which was originally Phobos at the time the event took place, but has presumably been reconnected to Mars in Update 19.0 (2016-11-11)).

repel the inevitable offensive that would follow his refusal. Enraged, Ruk demanded that all Corpus territory would be handed over to the Grineer, or else there would be swift consequences.

This information was picked up by the Lotus, who was unwilling to sway the Tenno towards either side. Instead, she left the Tenno with two options; support the Grineer to rescue the sleeping Tenno, at the cost of the Grineer gaining more control, or support the Corpus to drive off the Grineer, sacrificing their fellow Tenno in the process. The ensuing conflict would later be known as The Gradivus Dilemma.

After several skirmishes, the Board of Directors decided to stop bankrolling Alad due to the resources that were being wasted, resulting in a Grineer victory. The Board also stopped the funding of the Zanuka Project, forcing Alad to continue his project without their assistance. He subsequently set up research facilities on Jupiter.

The Hunt For Alad V

Following the Dilemma, the Tenno discovered that Alad had a captured Warframe he was experimenting on as part of the Project. Alad's former colleague Frohd Bek was tracking him down in response to the massive debts he had accrued during the Dilemma (though Bek had his own reasons, namely fearing that Alad could gain more power in the Board should the Zanuka Project prove successful). In response, Alad diverted the Infested to Frohd's ships, overwhelming them in the process and slowing down Frohd's progress.

Frohd Bek decided to cut a deal with the Tenno: eliminate the Infested from his ships so he could locate Alad, then offer said location to the Tenno. Despite the Lotus' initial distrust, she ultimately agreed to Frohd's terms, and the ensuing hunt for Alad V ultimately proved successful. Although he was able to construct a working Zanuka prototype by the time he was found, the Tenno defeated him and rescued the Warframe from his clutches. Despite this, Alad continues to work on the Project and occasionally sends out Zanuka Hunters to search for more "donors".

Suspicious Shipments

After a long period of inactivity, the Lotus discovered several Corpus ships that were

s were heavily armored, and prying eyes. Suspicious about these ships and their mysterious

The Tenno discovered that many of these ships contained samples of Infested tissue, heavily guarded by Corpus platoons, though some of these ships had suffered containment breaches and had been overrun with the Infested. Alad contacted the Tenno during their investigations, explaining that he disagreed with the Corpus ban on Infested Biotechnology, and had decided to focus his resources on this forbidden line of research.

Operation Breeding Grounds

The Lotus learned that Alad's experiments had allowed the Infestation to evolve, allowing it to infect and corrupt inorganic beings. Lotus also discovered that Alad had also developed Infested Hives as a means of directing the spread of the Infested; these hives could corrupt new ships or colonies almost immediately.

After hearing word of a massive Infestation outbreak near Eris, Lotus ordered the Tenno to intercept the Infested ships and destroy the hives in order to halt the outbreak, fearing that the newly evolved strain would quickly overrun the System if left unchecked.

Although the Tenno succeeded in stopping the outbreak, Alad sent out one last message that mocked the Tenno's efforts, claiming that their actions had only left Alad with the hardest, most vicious strains at his disposal.

Operation: Mutalist Incursions

With the evolved Infested at his disposal, Alad unveiled his plan to unleash a new "Mutalist Empire," infecting Tenno, Grineer, and Corpus alike in an attempt to unify and subordinate them. At this point the Lotus believed that the Infestation had corrupted Alad's mind, describing him as the Infestation itself. During this time, Mutalist Incursions would periodically surface across the Origin System, and the Tenno were tasked to purge them with the help of the Corpus and the Grineer.

Although the valiant and combined effort of the three factions quickly pushed the Mutalist Infestation back to Eris, they ultimately failed to fully exterminate the new breeds, which remained a permanent threat to the system.

rected the Tenno to once again the search continued, the Infested Warframe - the epitome of Alad V's Mutalist experiments - was finally revealed and the Lotus instructed the Tenno to put it out of its misery.

Despite the destruction of his experiments, Alad expressed no grudge towards the Tenno and instead announced merely his "disappointment", remarking that this could have been a chance for them to redeem their past "mistakes". Eventually, Alad was located once again and defeated.

Operation: Tubemen of Regor

After a long period of inactivity, it was revealed the work of Grineer researcher Tyl Regor had attracted Alad's attention. Alad, regretting his involvement with the Infestation, sent a message to the Lotus, asking for the Tenno to obtain samples of Tyl Regor's research before sabotaging his labs in the hopes of finding a cure for himself. The Corpus aristocrat Nef Anyo, however, saw this plea to the Lotus as a threat to his new position on the Corpus Board and immediately broadcast his alternate proposition for the Tenno: to destroy Tyl Regor's lab outright and prevent Alad V from possibly developing a cure for himself.

As both sides offered the locations of Regor's labs, the Lotus refused to sway the Tenno into a specific choice, and it was ultimately up to them to decide which of the two was the lesser evil. In the end, Alad V proved victorious in the PC and XB1 builds of the game, whereas Nef Anyo was triumphant in the PS4 build.

The Second Dream

Alad V, whose Infestation had significantly receded compared to his last encounter with the Tenno, offered his assistance in locating the Sentient Hunhow's remains, in exchange for a future "favor". He remained in contact with the Lotus as the Tenno pursued the Stalker to the Void and expressed a desire to dissect a Sentient Battalyst once one was encountered.

Alad makes clear his amazement when it is revealed that the Lotus had hidden the Orokin-era Moon, Lua, deep in the Void, to protect the Tenno "heart" from the Sentients. And, remembering his own experiments with dissecting Warframes, wonders why this slight awareness of Warframes addresses the meddlesome tendency to refer to any human to factions in his hatred)

Operation: Shadow Debt

Calling in the favor he obtained during The Second Dream, Alad requests the Tenno's assistance in locating and hunting down the Acolytes deployed to hunt him down. He instructs the Tenno to break into Corpus and Grineer systems to collect security data, and from there uses said data to locate the Acolytes for the Tenno to hunt down.

Once most of the Acolytes were defeated, Alad found out that there was one more Acolyte heading his way. Fearing that this last Acolyte was possibly the strongest out of the group, he asked the Tenno to defend him directly. After the Tenno protected Alad from the Acolytes, he gave the Tenno the rewards he had promised, asking them not to tell anyone about their deal.

The Index

Alad V is known to have worked closely with Loan Reclamation Division of The Index, and despite his involuntary retirement due to his body being taken over by the Infestation, some still say that Nako Xol and Ved Xol of the said division still undertake his assignment acting on his behalf. A Zanuka-like proxy, Lockjaw, which was delivered as payment for services rendered only serves to strengthen this suspicion.

Wolf of Saturn Six

Preluding to The Jovian Concord, Alad V received Grineer inmates from Gharn, the Warden of the Grineer Max-Pen Saturn Six that was previously undisclosed and named for being "some six leagues deep in the gas". The pen's model prisoner, the Wolf of Saturn Six, discovered this trafficking of his fellow inmates and broke out, but instead of fleeing he hacked into the Corpus communications network on Jupiter and sent them a demand to "DELIVER GHARN".

Alad V replied "GHARN IS YOURS", drawing the Wolf out only to imprison him again as an experiment for his Amalgam project, with him and his pack becoming infused with Sentient hybridization, and then sent him to hunt down the Tenno. However, the Wolf broke free from Alad's control and shortly thereafter disappeared.

The Jovian Concord

Main article: Fragments/Partnership

Alad V returned to work for the Corpus back on Jupiter, although due to the failure of the Zanuka Project and the Mutalist Incursion incident, along with Nef Anyo's Orb Vallis terraforming project winning the favor of Board of Director Frohd Bek, Alad's reputation has since severely diminished. He was approached by an old acquaintance, Regus, who offered him never-before-seen Old War tech. Alad immediately jumped the chance and begun investing, quickly signing a contract that Regus immediately agreed to despite Alad's attempts at manipulating loopholes. However, he soon came to realize something

We value your opinion and strive to make your experience better. Help us improve by answering our 5-minute survey him was actually a Sentient partnership with the enemy. Alad's had no choice but to comply with the Amalgam project and create soldiers for the Sentients, or the Ropalolyst would raze his gas city and his Corpus rivals would execute him for treason.

The Amalgam program turned out to be a success. As per agreements, the identities of his partners would be kept confidential, instating a strict no-fly zone on their craft. All while Alad V told to himself, "Life is Profit."

In addition to creating the Amalgams, Alad V also works to receive combat data against the Warframes and sends it over to his partners. However, his boasting about his "exciting new product line" is merely a facade, even encouraging and expressing gratitude to the Tenno when they fight the Ropalolyst.

The New War

Look outside! We'll all about to be under new management! Now do your part or I'll find a more forward-thinking replacement.

—Alad V

After the Sentients begin to invade the Origin System, the Corpus form an unlikely alliance with the Tenno and Grineer against a common enemy, with Alad V participating in the Veil Proxima. He orders Veso to fix the ship's command overrides so he can stand down fire control, occassionally getting the Corpus Tech's name wrong. Alad V soon reveals that they are about to be "under new management", with Veso questioning his intentions to betray the Corpus Board of Directors.

After engaging all overrides, a Murex attempts to dock, with Alad V claiming to have formed a "peaceful and profitable" deal with the Sentients. Veso, enraged at Alad's betrayal, reengaged fire control and interrupted Alad V's speech, ordering to fire into the heart of the Murex. The destruction of the Sentient ship causes a shockwave that severely damages the Corpus ship, leaving Alad V's fate unknown.

Behavior

Alad V himself appears as a man in a metallic blue robe, with a disc-shaped controller around his neck which powers Zanuka.

t to run around the arena and work. He does however have a

- Electric Shield: Akin to Volt's Electric Shield, he can summon a white energy shield to block bullets from afar.
- Flame Pulse: When a player is close enough to Alad, he will summon a fire burst around himself to knock the Tenno away. It has little to no recharge time, meaning attempts to do close-quarters attacks are futile and can always be defended against.
- Blinding Beam: A lightning bolt strikes from his hand and connects to a target Tenno. After a second, the target will be blinded for a few seconds as the entire screen flashes white.

Strategy

Alad V cannot be taken down until Zanuka is slain first. However, its shields have innate damage reduction and therefore are extremely durable, but will vanish once Alad V's own shields are depleted. Avoid using Toxin damage against Alad, as it ignores shields.

In the event Alad V's health is depleted before Zanuka is killed, he will collapse in a state similar to bleedout, and Zanuka will immediately rush to his aid and bring him back on his feet, restoring a portion of his shields. Although Zanuka becomes an easier target when attempting to rescue Alad, it may be easier to ignore Alad after his shields are down and attack Zanuka until it is destroyed.

Trivia

- Alad V is voiced by [DE]Skree, who also voices Captain Vor, General Sargas Ruk, and Shik Tal.
- Alad V's name is spoken as "Alad Vee" and not "Alad the Fifth" as it would normally be interpreted.
- Alad V has a continued and deep interest in biotics in general and perhaps possesses high knowledge in biology. This is shown by him being the first person to manipulate Warframes (to create Zanuka) and commanding the Infested (and evolving them).
- Alad V is the character most involved in the lore of Warframe Era, totaling seven events, one special alert and two quests of exposure, making him the most

- His diplomacy skills seem to be sorely lacking, as evidenced from most interactions with even the Tenno that sided with Corpus in the Gravidus Dilemma event. Boasting about what he will do to captured Tenno cryopods, saying Tenno have no eyes for unknown reasons, and also talking about how much it pains him to give rewards to Tenno that supported his cause.
- Alad V believes the Tenno do not have eyes. This could be a reason to the Zanuka Project, as Alad V has minimal knowledge about the nature of the Tenno and wishes to do research, not even knowing that the Tenno control their Warframes remotely, rather than from inside the suits.
  - This might also hint at the relationship between the Tenno and their Warframes. Other characters such as Captain Vor also hint at a similar conclusion in their respective dialogues.
  - This might also actually be an insult, having "no eyes" may mean not "seeing" the scheme of things.
  - Ironically, save Vor and allies of the Tenno, Alad V expresses the strongest interest in the Tenno.
- Despite the animosity between the Corpus and the Tenno, Alad V still treats them as potential business partners, as evidenced by his dialogue in the Gravidus Dilemma.
- The fan base considers his slogan to be "Profit numbs the feeling."
- He has created a forum account on the Warframe forums to argue with General Sargas Ruk: Alad V \(https://forums.warframe.com/index.php?/user/482825-alad v/\)
- A leaked trailer \(https://forums.warframe.com/index.php?/topic/130238-the-alad -v-trailer/\) was released in the forums as the showcase for the PS4. Though the original trailer \(http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=7QzMaXVxpLQ\) was released a short time after.
- In the PS4 trailer, the letters on Alad V's neckpiece translate to "ALADV GREG", most likely a humorous reference to level designer Scott McGregor.
- When downed, Alad will refer to Zanuka as a female. This might be in a literal sense or simply calling it "her" shows his affection toward it, like any other pet.

- Rhino Stomp did not cause a time-stopping effect as it normally should.
- Dispel causes stagger in actuality rather than knockdown as shown in the trailer.
- It seems that Alad V was to be replaced by Darvo as the new chairman of the Corpus Board, the main aristocratic leadership on Corpus politics. His ranking was known on the Profit trailer as he makes a transaction among his fellow Corpus leadership through the Zanuka Project, although, this has changed as one of the chairmen from the board called Alad V an impeachment, specifically Frohd Bek, who is the actual father of Darvo, which resulted in The Hunt For Alad V. Exiled, his seat from the board is thus left empty as Darvo has shown disdain for Bek's ambition.
- So far the only humanoid Corpus bosses are Alad V and The Sergeant.
- Zanuka and Mesa are the first, and currently only, evidence of any faction other than the Orokin or Sentient having any success manipulating Warframes. The game has made mention of both the Corpus and the Grineer being unsuccessful trying to utilize their power in the past.
- If one looks closely, the arc-like beams on Zanuka's head seems similar to the Corrupted / Frost Prime headpieces.
- A Nekros can create a Zanuka Shadow with Shadows of the Dead if the Nekros is the Frame to strike the killing blow. If this occurs, it will primarily use its missiles. This is the only known case of a boss that can be made into a Shadow.
- Due to the similarities between the term and his name, Alad V has acquired the derogatory nickname "Salad V" in some areas of the Warframe community. This has also carried over to his Mutalist incarnation. Also, his "collar" has often been compared to a toilet seat.
- Alad V's controller for Zanuka looks like a Middle English ruff, which was worn during the Elizabethan and Jacobean periods.
- Valkyr Gersemi skin, which is meant to show Valkyr before Alad's experiments on her, has almost exactly the same coloring as the Zanuka that Alad controls, hinting that the outer layers of Valkyr's Warframe were literally stripped and grafted onto the Zanuka.
- The forearm restraints on Valkyr might be inspired by the forearm gilding/gauntlets present on Valkyr Prime.

- Sometimes when downed, Zanuka will revive him, but he gets stuck in a shield and cannot be damaged except using the slam attack of a melee weapon.
- Sometimes when Alad V is downed, Zanuka will revive him, but he will get stuck inside of walls and/or the floor and take no damage regardless of attacks.
- If Zanuka is pushed out of the map, defeating Alad V will not be possible. It seems that Zanuka is still alive beneath the map if you push it off (tested with Soul Punch and Kestrel). Zanuka eventually appears near Alad V and revives him.
- There's a chance that the blind effect employed by Alad V can get stuck on a character; this bug is fixed via revival.
- Zanuka can be locked down for an infinite duration (or until it dies) with Trinity's Well of Life. Energy Vampire can then be used to cause damage to Zanuka while also replenishing the energy of Warframes close by.
- There appears to be a bug where Alad V can be killed when using a fast enough melee weapon, e.g. Obex. In these cases, if Alad is repeatedly downed in close combat, he will eventually be killed outright. Even if Zanuka is still alive at this point, Lotus will respond with the objective completed message and direct you to extraction. Zanuka can still be killed at this point.
- If a Nekros uses Shadows of the Dead to revive Zanuka and then kills Alad V, the shadow Zanuka will still revive Alad V when he dies.
- Alad V can possibly bleed out if Zanuka is kept from reviving him long enough (achievable with Nyx's Chaos ability).
- Sometimes Alad V and Zanuka may appear T-posing when encountered, making them easy to defeat in a few hits. This glitch can be spotted if his health bar has already appeared when the mission just started.
