Anyone heard of Muller Kitchen Knives?

I picked up a set of Muller Kitchen knives (14 piece) for $30 at an auction. I know they're not really the best compared to Wusthof or Shun, but I wanted something decent without paying a fortune since I'm on a budget right now. I tried to do some searching on them but didn't find much and only found one price for the set of $179.00 for the set. Anyone have any info on them or have tried them?

I can't speak to those knives in particular, but I would be very uncomfortable buying those. You definitely don't need fourteen kitchen knives if you're on a budget. Three knives will do fine: one good chef's knife, one decent bread knife, and one cheap paring knife. If you can get the chef's knife sharp enough, you don't even need the bread knife unless you are slicing extremely crusty bread. Honestly you can get by in life with just the chef's knife.

Mercer, Mundial, and Victorinox have good, inexpensive offerings in this price range.

So I ended up selling the set for about $100. But I never found anything more about them.

Was gifted a Benchmade strap cutter by a buddy today. As a budget knife guy this'll probably be my one and only blade from this brand.
