It's based off of this chart from the wiki. A 747 amp would be the Klamora Prism, Phahd Scaffold, and Certus Brace. Amp parts 1-4 are from Onkko in Cetus, while 5-7 are from Little Duck in Fortuna.

So, when people say 747, it means [7th Prism] - [4th Scaffold] - [7th brace].

Amp parts are divided into tiers: 1-4 from Onkko in Cetus, 5-7 from Little Duck in Fortuna.

First number is the Prism, second number is the Scaffold, third number is the Brace

In this case, 747 would be: Klamora Prism, Phahd Scaffold, Certus Brace

Amps are crafted part by part, then put together by the quills amp parts are unlocked 3 by 3 each rank at the quills. The parts of the first rank are the "1" parts, the ones of the second are the "2" parts, etc...

there's 4 tier of parts from the quills, so it's 1 to 4

in fortuna, the hidden syndicate Vox Solaris propose 3 more set of parts, so they are named 5 to 7

A 747 amp means it has the prism 7, the support 4 and the brace 7.

You make amps using a prism, a scaffold and a brace. Mushroom hat man Onkko sells 4 different part sets of prism, scaffold and brace. Backroom robot lady Little Duck sells 3 different part sets.

In the order they are shown in Onkko and Little Duck's shops, the sets are numbered 1 to 7. So for example if you want prism 4, scaffold 3 and brace 7, then you would call it a 437 amp. A 747 amp is an amp made with prism 7, scaffold 4 and brace 7.

Custom-built Amp parts of tiers 7 for the first segment (main fire), 4 for the second (alternate fire), and 7 for the third (stat boost/tradeoff).

7: Short Beam Cannon +

4: Glaive Throwing +

7: High Critical Chance

in your AMP that all those terms also exist for weapons for you to relate.
