With Aniwave.to having gone down...Is Aniwave.se safe to use?

Question

I love Aniwave and seeing it go down really has me in the dumps, Aniwave.se just is what i'm looking for since it's a carbon copy of .to

Is it safe to be used? Should I stick to hianime for now?

as long as you're able to watch the anime and have ublock, shit doesn't matter because its not like you're getting a crack for a software so virtually it can't harm you by just visiting a website unless they discovered an exploit in your browser or something

Should be. Just don't make an account on it or click any ads. The whole idea behind avoiding clones is a) they'll steal your info if you do anything other than just watch videos, and b) honour among thieves, directing traffic to the original site since they're the ones who put the effort in. But b is irrelevant and a is manageable.

AniWave.ch seems to be another carbon copy.

trying the .se one currently. Since there's no adblock extensions for Xbox Edge, the others drive my browser nuts with popup tabs. Some sort of annoying overlay it seems.

Smack one down, another one pops up huh. I love piracy.

What's more interesting is this one showed just days after .to came down.

As long as you're using a proper ad blocker like uBlock Origin or Brave Browser, yes.

Looking ahead, we want to keep this community alive and thriving. While we'll be moving things around gradually, we want to assure you that it will still stay true to the theme of anime and all its beauty. Our goal is to open the server up to the public, making it a place where anime lovers can connect and share.
