Focus/Madurai

EDIT

< FocusMaduraiVazarinNaramonUnairuZenurik

They followed the path of Engage The Enemy. Their swift, uncompromising onslaught, holding nothing back and recklessly attacking their foes, could vanquish an opponent before he had the chance to steel himself. Speed and savagery characterized this school.

—In-Game Description

I see a cloud, a gathering storm... the Madurai Way. Our path was to Engage The Enemy... to sweep across our foes before they had a chance to steel themselves.

—Operator

Not to be confused with the  Madurai Polarity.

Preceded by

Focus 2.0/Madurai since Update 31.5 (2022-04-27)WARFRAME Wiki

The Madurai way is a school dedicated to offense. Tenno of the Madurai way are unrelenting fighters, excelling in the arts of ambush and barrage. Those who master the Madurai school are granted predatory, savage power.

This school focuses to improve the damage output of Operators and Warframes. Their Way-Bound increases Amp energy pool and regeneration.

Since its predecessor Madurai 2.0, this school further increases Operator damage and now increases Amp Critical Chance and Warframe Casting Speed, and consecutive Void Slings now increases Operator energy efficiency and Warframe Ability Strength. Void Strike was additionally reworked to provide an immediate damage bonus over a duration with a cooldown and also increases Ammo Efficiency, rather than a slow buildup that enhances a fixed number of attacks. However, Madurai no longer increases Warframe elemental damage, no longer produces 🔥 Heat effects, and Void Mode no longer blinds enemies.
