CODEX

Hunhow's gift, carved from the bones of his kin. Shots can be charged and held; release them just before the full charge for maximum effect.

A weapon as old as those you hunt. Nataruk.

*Nataruk can fire fast and true...
But you will need to time your release with the weapon's rhythm if you hope to pierce the blighted skin of an Archon.*

—Hunhow

Nataruk is Hunhow's bow, forged from Sentient remains. It has infinite ammo, and releasing the shot just before a full charge will perform a "perfect shot" that is more effective.

Notes

- Charged and perfect shot arrows are coated with Void-like trails and "explodes" on impact.
 - However, despite the visuals, the weapon has no area of effect properties.
- The projectile hitbox of both the perfect shot and the charged shot is quite large,

be perfectly precise.

- Arrows do not arc while travelling.
 - Arrows also have infinite travel distance, traveling in a straight line until they hit an obstacle or go out of bound.
- Charged shots and perfect shots have infinite Punch Through against bodies.
- Quick shots deal forced Impact procs.
- Not Silent, making it ill-suited for stealth.
- No headshot multiplier on charged or perfect shots. Quick shots will still benefit from headshots, however.

Tips

- The larger projectiles and lower Fire Rate (each shot is a more significant portion of the damage) make (Primed) Shred's Punch Through a good choice to ignore small pieces of terrain and corners that it might otherwise clip.
- Equipping mods that boost fire rate such as Speed Trigger can make it harder to fire a perfect shot.
 - This makes it an excellent candidate for using Critical Delay over Point Strike.
 - Be also mindful when in a squad with allied Warframes that have base or augmented abilities boosting fire rate (such as Wisp), and the respective adjustment needed to still land perfect shots.
- The perfect shot's large hitbox and ease in achieving headshots benefits from headshot-focused mods and arcanes such as (Galvanized) Argon Scope, Arcane Rage and Primary Deadhead, as well as Warframe abilities like Covenant.
- Due to charged and perfect shot having large and long lasting visual effects, it is recommended to use darker energy colours to reduce screen noise.
- The size and intense glow of the Perfect Shot projectile can make it difficult to control if combined with Ivara's Navigator, so if both are going to be used together, darkening the energy color will be beneficial.
- Nidus can make devastating use of this weapon in conjunction with Teeming Virulence; cluster enough enemies with Larva and use Virulence to trigger the augment's effects, then finish off any surviving targets caught in the mass.

Known Bugs

- Galvanized Aptitude is multiplicative to base damage sources on direct hits from perfect and charged shots.

Trivia

- Nataruk is an archeological excavation in Kenya where the remains of 27 people were found, all of whom have died 10,000 years prior to their discovery in 2012. The choice of name reflects how the bow was forged from Sentient remains by Hunhow, much like War before it.
- The name could also be a reference to Natah, as the bow was forged by Hunhow to help the Drifter save her life.
- With the inclusion of this bow, there is now at least one bow representing every major faction in WARFRAME; Tenno (Paris, Cernos, and Daikyu, among others), Orokin (Paris Prime and Cernos Prime), Infested (Mutalist Cernos and Proboscis Cernos), Corpus (Lenz), Grineer (Kuva Bramma), and Sentient (Nataruk).
- As indicated by its game files, Nataruk was originally called Omicrus.
