Ankarsrum Mixer vs KitchenAid?

Equipment

Hi all - I'm trying to decide between an 8 qt Kitchen Aid Mixer or an Ankarsrum and was hoping to get a little feedback. I love the large bowl in both, as I double or more many cake and buttercreams when I bake. I'd like to get into baking more breads, but not something I do regularly at the moment.

Ankarsrum: I love the open top and the scraper option in the Ankarsrum. It seems like it would be easier to add ingredients as it's blending and you don't have to stop to scrape the sides of the bowl down. My main concern is what attachments to use for mixing cake batters and buttercreams... I know it comes with the whisks, but it looks like those can only be used with the smaller bowl which wouldn't be conducive to doubling batches. Also, since there doesn't seem to be an attachment similar to the paddle, I'm unsure what would be a good substitute.

Kitchen Aid: I have a smaller kitchen aid (5 qt, maybe?) which I am used to, of course. I am comfortable with knowing how my cakes and buttercreams will turn out and what attachments to use. However, it seems to struggle with thicker batters (even just chocolate chip cookies!) and the mixer head moves back and forth. I've never tried Sorry to resurrect this, but glad to see someone mention the Bosch. I'm deciding between the three of these and mainly just see people mention the KA and the Ank. Do you mind telling me why you settled on the Ank?

Honestly? Because at the time I wanted to try the Bosch but it was sold out lol. For what I use the Ank for, I'm happy with it though and it gets the job done without any issues.
