If you want something more special with contractions, and many more interactivity options (syncing, games, online and more), the Max 2 is the clear winner - especially in terms of interactivity. The contractions feel good but are not as obvious as the strong vibrations.

The Max 2 is great if you can have enough privacy. If you can't, you can ignore the noise.

I have a full review on the Max 2 by Lovense with more details on its noise levels.

I hope that helps! In short, if you want to sync to music, you're looking for an all-round masturbator that can sync to music, Keon is my go-to.

I had the Max 2 while it worked great it was my first lovesense so syncing to movies was awesome. It is louder than a lawn mower, I moved on to the Gush can hands free cum.

You shouldn't have mentioned the gush. Now that is next on my list LMAO I appreciate the response hopefully they release a Max 2 Supressor for the noise Lol

I bought it, but it's too tight. What should I do?

You may want to read my review of the Max 2 as well for some information. Basically - it is a very good toy for the price. You will not find another VR-compatible masturbator in this price range. I think Kiiroo just came out with the PowerBlow, but I have not tried it yet and it is sold out constantly.

The Max 2 does have its issues too though - it is quite loud and bulky. Looks a bit cheap in all honesty. Plus, men on the bigger side sometimes find it a bit too tight. That said, it does feel quite nice. It offers a sort of pulsating stimulation that feels pretty unique.

Overall - definitely worth a try if the noise is not an issue and you are not packing a Mandingo level dick down there.

My wife says she wants two things inside of her, one being me and one being some sort of toy like a strap-on or something. But she already has trouble sometimes just with me. What should I get her?
