Please correct me if I'm wrong, but this calc
20% loss for infusion? 4g at 20% thc = 800
THC. If using 240ml oil, that's 2.338mg/ML.

Ardent Nova posted about dry herb to oil ratios, I think ghee (clarified butter) was best. Their chart shows 0.5g per 30ml was the optimal saturation point. They also posted on boosting via re-infusion. So infuse, strain, then infuse again. Nearly doubled potency. I don't understand why you can't just use more and just do one infusion. Does the cool down reheat help with the noid saturation issue? Just food for thought.

saturated if that makes any sense.

I usually fit as much as possible. To assuage any concerns, I made a small amount of cannabis marc and use it to infuse coconut cream that I use in my coffee. I also use it in my beverage. That way the "real" medicine is as potent as possible and I also don't waste anything.

For every cup of coconut oil I infuse I try to add at least 1/4 to 1/2 oz of decarbbed weed. Makes some really strong edibles you can keep for long time as a tincture

Thanks for the reply. 😊

Do you give it more than one cycle by infusing the same material to fresh oil after?

1oz. Standard is .5oz for every cup of coconut oil that way.

I'd use a 1/4 cup when making a batch of gummies. It would be like 400 gummy bears a batch and 3 of them would rock you. I made this almost a year ago and still have a half cup of oil. It was technically tincture on a 8hr run with vegetable glycerin.
