There's the `jq` tool you can use to print out a json with sorted keys `jq -S . A.json`. Then compare the results with any text-diffing tool you like. On my linux I'd maybe do
diff <(jq -S . A.json) <(jq -S . B.json)

It is fast and does take care ordering Json object keys and checking checksum. This ensures that semantically same Jsons compare the right way
