I never realized this one market was open to the public and always thought it was restaurant retail. I got one on the left. It was nicely balanced and priced right for $22. There were heavier ones for less, but they just didn't feel right. I think I saw a carbon steel one (because it had some rust in it), and it was $18, but it felt off.

There were many many more cleavers, but I couldn't take more pics because it was Sunday and crowded. I was getting pushed out the aisle

If you're in Montreal on St-Laurent street in China town there are a few shops.

I can try to find the exact name, but it was right next to a shop that sells all sorts of Chinese herbs.

These are decent, especially second one. Not as good as 202 and 208 series, but at this price great purchases.

I actually have this knife. My local market had them behind a counter, so I didn't really get to check it out before I paid for it. It's a bit thicker and heavier than I expected but it'll be a great beater knife.
