I love voice attack, tough it's a bit iffy if your pronunciation and microphone aren't very good, so beware. But you can at least test this with the Windows voice recognition first.

I've been using VA for Star Citizen together with HCS voicepacks - great demonstration here:

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=mrZ3l\_1S-t8 and it's also nice having them for simple fluff like this and I can't play that game without voice commands and that nice lady responses anymore. Although it took a lot of work to add and edit all the custom commands to suit my playstyle, the effort was really worth it, but sadly the computer will still fail to recognise my commands from time to time, but that is as I said a problem with each person's pronunciation and equipment quality.

Should probably be simple for BDO tough, as you wouldn't be binding time-critical commands like FLARES!!! in a flight simulator, it would be perfect with just binding all of the plentiful UI hotkeys or maybe also do simple macros. Having one of those voicepacks installed is also a nice bonus maybe not suitable for BDO but it would be for other games, as it comes with over 2,000 recorded lines that you can use for many things (if you care about computer responding to you). I also used it for Mechwarrior and would also be great for any other sim-like game or any game with a lot of commands to memorize.

To tell you the truth, I could never memorize all the ship commands in SC for landing procedures, flight modes, gimbal locks, power control etc. until I started using VA which pretty much unlocked full functionality of my ship just with a simple voice command. Struggling to use keyboard for 50 different ship commands is just too much, now I'm just lazy and simply tell the computer to lock and fire the missile, or decouple+stop afterburners with 1 voice command macro, while I retain 100% control of ship and weapon movement at all times. Or a simple QoL things like switching camera views without having to reach for F4 (or ctrl+u in BDO for screenshot mode). It's pretty darn cool.

Pearl Abyss has your word that you won't put more than one ability in your voice macro? Well I'm satisfied, let's allow 3rd party macro applications. Promises were made.

I am not as advanced with Voice Attack as you are, I think. I only use pre-made with down edits of Voice Packs in Elite: Dangerous. But I'll help in any way I can. It's an awesome program, and I imagine an amazing utility if you're disabled.

Edit: and to be clear, this won't give anyone an advantage in combat. Voice Attack had a somewhat of a natural delay that makes doing combos or reaction-dependent abilities slower than you can do on a keyboard/mouse manually. It's a boon if you're disabled and have limited mobility in your hands, but you won't be executing time-critical combos with it too fast. On top of that, BDO's lag issues means a lot of the timing you do with Voice Attack can be too fast or too slow, ruining the command. I tried to make a command that would cast Speed Spell for me and then switch back to my awakening. Most of the time, no matter the timing, it failed. The times it actually worked, it was way too slow to be viable.

And as another assurance, the macros in VoiceAttack are nice, but are only good on very rigid games like space sims. Other than that, it's mostly so you can have things like saying "Music" play a playlist for you. Or have a witty AI voice pack companion tell you one of six random dirty jokes.
