How is the Black Widow v4 (75 and pro)? I am a little scared off by some of what I heard.

Question

I have never owned a Razer keyboard or really any gaming keyboard except for like a red dragon key board years ago, mostly have custom/enthusiast type keyboards but I like razer and own 6 of their mice and want a flagship decked out rgb keyboard that has chroma and can be used as both a gaming keeb and a daily driver for work to kind of round out the setup for when I want to feel like embracing the gamerness aesthsetic with rgb. So when I heard there is a hotswappable 75 percent keyboard with tactiles (an unusual choice for switches but welcomed for multi purpose) I got interested.

However I heard a lot of things about double clicking etc. I had the same thing happen to me when I got the GMMK pro and used their orange pandas. Had to replace like a half a dozen switches, but maybe it was something I did as it was my first time lubing switches or maybe it was just the combo of those switches and that board because the issue never occurred when I used those switches in a different board or put different switches in the GMMK pro.

really needs to get their QA under control and we've all known that for years, while plenty of switch manufacturers release switches with widespread double typing issues they normally acknowledge it at the very least while I have not seen anything from razer about this. (also I know I'm replying to something that is 3 months old, I simply do not care.) have a reasonable day fellow human
