How to download entire seasons off Tubi using yt-dlp

Is there a simpler way for me to download entire season off a website like Tubi without having to go at it one episode at a time?

Pretty sure I just put in the show main page url and it goes and grabs each episode for each season. For instance for Black Scorpion I think I got all episodes with this url <https://tubitv.com/series/3859/black-scorpion>

Of course, it does them one at a time but it does it automatically. You can specify the name of the show as a prefix too. I think syntax might be:

yt-dlp -o "Black-Scorpion%(title)s-%(id)s.%(ext)s" https://tubitv.com/series/3859/black-scorpion

For searches or larger categories containing multiple shows, for instance the "Leaving Soon" category, I scroll to the very bottom of the list and use Link Klipper to get all results, rename this to a txt file and do it as a batch download. Syntax is:

yt-dlp --all-subtitles --batch-file tubi20230829_leaving_soon.txt

It will grab entire seasons of shows, but a downside is they all get named something like "s01-e01-armed-and-dangerous [473975].mp4" so all seasons and episodes of all TV shows in the results will be intermixed, meaning I will someday have to track down what show is 473975, separate them out, and rename them.

Get em while you can. I noticed yesterday they are adding DRM to even some old shows.

The tubi extractor doesn't have playlist capabilities, so your next-best option is to build an URL list and use the '`--batch-file`' option.

There are browser extensions that can help you grab multiple URL links from a webpage that you can use to build a list quickly. I typically use 'Link Klipper'

Following because when I tried this recently I had to click through to grab the URL and paste each into a txt file which I then used - - batch-file with. So tedious, there has got to be a better way.

I highly recommend taking a look at the 'Link Klipper' extension. I can go on tubi, list a season for a show, and extract all the links on the page into a text file. It will require some light editing of the file, but its super easy.
