How to separate Analogue 1+2 on Scarlett 2i2?

On my Scarlett 2i2, I have a mic in input 1 and an electric guitar in input 2. I can monitor/record these inputs separately in my DAW (Reaper) but on Zoom and Discord, they're always combined as Analogue 1+2. Is there a way to separate these? I am trying to use my mic in call without people hearing the direct input of my electric guitar when I play it. I am on Windows 10.

I think u can, when u set to stereo mic will be on left channel and guitar on right - u can use some software like voicemeeter to make a separate input from this channels and pin one of them to call software

Like u/RafMazurek said, Voicemeeter can separate the inputs. I posted a sorta how-to in another thread: https://old.reddit.com/r/Focusrite/comments/lcxyve/is_there_a_way_to_select_only_one_of_the_inputs/

Another thing you can try is, in Windows, set Analogue 1+2 to 1 channel. This should only out the Mic in Windows. Then in Reaper, set the audio system to ASIO to record the guitar.

I've been producing music for only 15 hours total and I haven't won a Grammy yet. What am I doing wrong? My DAW is a handheld Gameboy. Should I get Pro Tools? Help pls.
