How early to line up for the 5090?

Tustin, CA

According to Micro Center's website, they will be distributing vouchers to people based on their place in line:

https://www.microcenter.com/site/brands/nvidia-geforce-rtx5000_series.aspx

What should I do to improve my chances of getting a card?

To increase your chances of getting a card, we suggest arriving early at your local Micro Center store on launch day. Based on past launches, lines may form before store opening.

What does the line typically look like on launch day, how did it look for the 4090? Will there be people lined up 24 hours in advance? How about the previous night? Looking for anyone's experience with the 4090 launch or anything similar, especially at the Tustin location. Thanks!

If you are not already in line, you will not get one.

It wasn't that bad for the 4090. I have friends who went later in the afternoon on opening day and had no issue getting cards. I'm sure the people who were there first could pick and choose, but they didn't sell out day 1.

To give an answer that isn't sarcastic, people start lining up overnight, but those who got there at least a couple hours before opening got cards at my location.

Each area is unique though, some locations had 4090 until the end of the day, some sold out in 15 min.

Should be enough to just show up at open. If you want to choose an exact model, show up super early

The 5090 targeted audience isnt enough to warrant camping out at the store.
