Looks good. You are right homepage is definitely more tedious to set up. I, too, follow Tecno Tim. He is very informative.

Hey, everyone. I was the one who made the Homepage dashboard post a few days ago:

https://www.reddit.com/r/selfhosted/comments/1co3fab/homepage_dashboard_deployed_w_k3s_end_result/

Homepage can be a bit difficult, and full reference configuration isn't completely available. The documentation for specific things is quite decent, but not much that ties everything together. I got quite a few requests for my configuration from comments and messages. Figured I would drop my configuration, and personal Kubernetes deployment of it here: <https://github.com/epoch-philosophy/homepage-example>

Hope this serves useful.

Homepage is a blast to set up and configure, make sure you spin up code-server alongside it to make life a lot easier though.

Good question. It's only for the widgets. For some weird reason the widgets will intermittently cut out and send errors when using my domain via an Traefik. Absolutely zero idea as to why. They work and sync up fine, then I'll get API errors claiming it can't reach the service, then it goes to work again.

When using pure HTTP, and/or having it ping my ClusterIP, it works great.

I'd love to hear if anyone else here has had this problem.

So does this software just have a ton of integrations for all the many types of APIs and devices?

Yes. It does. And it's super damn cool.

Does anyone know how to get Unifi widget working? I'm having a hard time getting an API key from my dream router

The Unifi widget doesn't use an API key just Username and Password you use to login to router Dream Machine.
