Steam Controller with steam Link app on Ipad

Does anyone here use the steam controller for remote play on ipad? I used to use it all the time without any problem. I paired it once and then just hit the steam button to reconnect.

but lately with the new big picture it seems like I have to reconnect the controller different way each time. Sometimes I have to hold the back button, sometimes the x, sometimes the B.

I can pair it in the steam app before connecting to the host computer every time, but then it's in lizard mode once I get into Steam.

Sometimes I can pair it in iOS settings, but sometimes it takes 8 tries. I can sometimes pair it while holding Y but the moment I touch one of the pads, everything stops working.

Has anyone figured out a sure fire way to get it paired up every time?

Anyways, some of that will depend on whether you're using bluetooth or the steam receiver on the computer end or if both are bluetooth. The controller can hold 2 configurations for both two steam receivers and 2 bluetooth connections at a time, this help document shows all the startup presses about half way down, take note of what the back/start button startups do when it turns on that way, that's in the smaller text under the bigger image about the face button startup types. <https://help.steampowered.com/en/faqs/view/1796-5FC3-88B3-C85F>

The controller has only ever been paired with the ipad.

At least yours works. I can't seem to get Steam to recognize a controller when I stream to my iPad.

oh so I figured this out.

First make sure the controller is paired with the ipad through the ipad system settings. Then turn the controller off. Then go into steam remote play and start streaming. When I can see big picture mode all I have to do is turn the controller on and it connects every time. If I turn on the controller before going into steam through the steam remote play app the controller won't work. It seems counter intuitive because the app shows those green check marks to confirm that everything is connected but I just ignore the controller check mark.

I never have to repair the controller, I just go into steam and then turn the controller on and it works every time.
