Is anyone here happy with the 15 inch MacBook Air?

Discussion

How does the size feel? Just right, or too big?

Are you glad you got the 15 inch instead of the 13 inch? Is it really that big of a size difference?

Any other advantages of the 15 inch over the 13 inch?

Anything things you don't like about the 15 inch?

Any other advantages of 15 over 13. Nope, apart from on the screen they're the same.

I've used both and it's truly a preference thing. I personally prefer the 13 for compactness when traveling. But for someone that uses it at home or wants a big screen regardless of travel then it's a fantastic option .

At home I use a desktop with 2 x 27" screens - so for me a 15" is already like trying to decorate the hallway through the letterbox.

I go for real estate over weight every time.

I think the 15" looks but ugly with the sides not having any speaker grilles, but I'd still buy one if I needed a laptop.

wrists in the laptop rather than the sharp edge.

The only time I've wished I had the 13", was when I wanted to wear my shoulder bag instead of a full backpack. But that also doesn't really matter to me because if I really need that level of portability, I just use my iPad Pro.

IMO, the 13" is too small, and the 15" is just about perfect size. If I had to get a laptop again, and I really need the portability, I would have to get a 14" Pro because I genuinely just cannot use a 13" Air. I'm blind enough to begin with.

Yes. This exactly. The 15 inch is perfect if you don't want to keep cutting your wrist on the laptop's sharp edge IMHO, 15" MBA makes sense for vision impaired users that don't have multi monitor. setup, as well as for those that use the laptop for media consumption. But the portability of the 13" MBA is IMHO the killer USP.

I've been saving up for a MacBook Air but my budget is limited so the only option I can afford is the 13 inch Macbook Air M2 16GB 256GB. What do you think of this model?
