Hey, looks pretty cool! How does this compare with something like NetBird?

  5   Reply ...ben-ba • 10mo ago

Its the missing webgui network controller for zerotier.

Netbird is sponsored by the german government and has nearly the same features? It seems thta both have a android client which can get updates from the network controller. This is important for my usecase as other solutions missing this.

Looks great, I'll check it out!

Good to see it's also on ztnet vps using it's own network.

I've also noticed I cannot ssh into other machines when I'm connected to my ztnet network but I had no problem ssh with regular zt network

Yes, you can add the controller to its own ZeroTier network. Once added, it will appear as "Controller" in the network status. The Ztnet is essentially a wrapper around the standard ZeroTier setup, so there isn't any custom ZeroTier build involved. SSH should work correctly as long as there are no firewall rules blocking the connection.
