MacBook Pro Display - MBP M3 Pro vs TWO MBP M4 Pro

Discussion

I bought my MacBook Pro - M3 Pro, 18GB RAM / 512GB HD a couple of weeks ago. Once, the M4 was released, I immediately picked one up as well (MacBook Pro - M4 Pro, 24GB RAM / 512GB HD). As I was working with them side by side, I noticed that the display (brightness) on the M3 appeared to be a little more superior or visually more appealing to my eyes than the M4. I was wondering how this might be possible? I did a side by side comparison to both settings on all fronts (display, True Tone, nightshift, etc.) and still noticed that the M3 appeared to look better with respect to how the whites / brightness was displaying. I thought to myself, maybe the M4 might have been defective, so I went to the Apple Store yesterday and bought another M4 (same specs) and I had 3 of them in my possession at the same time (for now). I did side by side comparisons and it still appears that the M3 display (to my at least) looks sharper than the M4's.

As mentioned above, all the settings on all 3 machines are identical to each other (brightnesses are maxed as well). The only difference between the machines (in terms of settings and OS) is that the M3 is running Sequoia 15.1 Build (24B83) which is the most release for the M3 and the M4's are running Sequoia 15.1 Build (24B2083)

So, I ended up going to two Apple stores to show this to them. The first store, the person saw and agreed with me, but had no explanation. The second store I went to, within minutes, she was able to figure it out and I take back my original observation, because it's working amazing now! Total 180. Actually very impressed with the display.

SOLUTION: Settings > Displays > Preset (list) to Calibrate Display > Visual Fine Tune

Which will then allow you to pick if you want warmer or colder colours as the tone.

The display is incredible now and my colours are incredibly sharp and vivid.

What are the downsides of buying an older MacBook Pro (M1/M2/M3 Pro) compared to a newer model if performance is not important?
