proxy_cache_bypass $http_upgrade;

I have some web applications that suggest using the below 2 lines for NGINX reverse proxying:

proxy_set_header Upgrade          $http_upgrade;
proxy_set_header Connection       $connection_upgrade;

I sometimes see the below line paired up with the above 2 lines in various examples online:

proxy_cache_bypass                $http_upgrade;

Is there any benefit to adding the below line to the other lines? Is there any performance gain/loss by adding this

Did the USDA really cancel local food purchases yesterday

Yes, the USDA canceled two major local food purchasing yesterday, March 11, 2025. The department cut over $1 billion that supported schools and food banks in buying food from farmers and producers. Specifically: The Local Food for Schools program provided $660 million for schools to purchase food from local producers. The Local Food Purchase program was terminated for the year 2025. The Local Food Purchase
