Why would anyone pirate adobe?

Question

Like yea everyone uses it and what not. But it kinda sucks from what I've heard? Like it's a common joke among flash animators that it crashes or something. And then I watch Noodle video and I'm reminded oh yea, this program exist and it's very buggy. Im not an expert on davinci resolve nodes but that seems like what someone who uses adobe might like. Plus it's free.

Nothing compares to Photoshop and Illustrator for photos and images.

Premier and Aftereffects are extremely useful and nice programs for video and special effects.

Dreamweaver is supreme for building websites.

Acrobat is the best program there is to work with PDFs.

etc.,

You are just showing you have never used any of these programs. If you had, you would have a different attitude.

Saying Adobe programs arent that great is like saying that Festool or Wiha dont know how to make tools. It just shows you don't know the subject matter you are talking about at all.

A whole ecosystem of extremely powerful plugins have been made by third party programs to work with Adobe products that just make them even better than stock.

I was shocked that Dreamweaver was still around. It's far from the best any more. I used to use Homesite and CF studio before Adobe bought Macromedia.

I run Adobe suite pirated. I use Ps, AI, InDesign, Premiere and After Effects. Installed it in the beginning of this year and had litteraly 0 issues so far on all programs. Just try it out, installing it is also easy just visit r/GenP.

   In your opinion, is there anything shady with GenP?

   I was hacked 2 months ago pretty badly and now I'm paranoid on what I download...

   Just wanna hear testimonials

Adobe has a bunch of deals with schools so they have a pretty strong grip on future workers. No way I'm paying a dumb little subscription just because I went to school.

Why, because like Apple products for a MAC, they're used by professionals and Adobe products are standard in their particular field for PCs.

Adobe makes tons of products. A lot of them are industry leaders, if not really good compared to the competition.

To answer your Flash (Animate) example.... Yeah it crashes. It's always been buggy. It's obtuse and confusing. It's alright; it does some good things`. The other programs that would do what Flash does are pretty expensive and, from a pirating standpoint, pretty difficult to find. You can either pirate a new Flash, or another program from 15 years ago...

Adobe has some of the best video editing programs. As a Mac user, Final Cut's libraries are notoriously big and Premiere Pro is one of the only other options

Adobe is simply the best at what they make and they know that so they charge an insane price for the best piece of software there is and people will buy it. The reason you would pirate adobe is how much you save and if it's only for fun and not a business to try it out. Another reason is just to make videos for family to help them out

I have a friend who works in construction he pirates adobe cause of all the features it has when you dl it cracked.

having to convert other file into pdf is something he needs and there are other feature that are simple, but adobe has them in a pay wall. I think the last time I saw him pay for adobe it was $120-$200 for the year one was the basic the other one came with more advanced stuff.
