Is there any self-hosted open source AI product for generating images? (something like gpt4all but for images)

I spent last couple of days checking out gpt4all and it is OK... far from perfect but way better that I could ever expect and now I wonder if there is a similar project for generating images with AI that I could host locally and integrate in my own projects (if I wanted to)

I use <https://github.com/AUTOMATIC111/stable-diffusion-webui>, its very nice to install, easy to use, very hard to master ;)

There's a few. The most common is Stable Diffusion (someone even got it running on a pi zero). Take a look here: <https://github.com/go-skynet/LocalAI>

I've been exploring similar options and noticed that self-hosted image AI products aren't as common as text-based ones like GPT4All. If you're looking to add a broader range of creative tools to your setup, Vondy could be helpful. It's versatile, supporting tasks like image generation, design, and even digital marketing. You could likely integrate it into your project and use it to handle a variety of AI-driven tasks, depending on what you're building.
