SimpleLogin - a self-hosted solution to protect your email address

Hi guys, I made a tool to hide my personal email by using "email alias". The project is fully open source and can be self-hosted. The self-hosting instruction is relatively simple and the most complex part is maybe DNS setup on your DNS registrar.

The code has been deployed in production since several months now and is stable. It also comes with some niceties like a Chrome/Firefox/Safari extension and (soon) mobile apps.

The github repo is on <https://github.com/simple-login/app>

Let me know if you have any feedbacks/questions!

Thanks for this project it looks really interesting. Will need to try it out soon. I am currently running a few domains with a catch-all to a single inbox, can simple-login handle multiple domains and retroactive alias creation?

retroactive alias

There's a feature called "catch-all" that will automatically create the alias when it receives an email for the first time, maybe that's what you meant?

So it's a FOSS version of spamgourmet?

Yes, SimpleLogin is quite similar to spamgourmet in terms of email forwarding features. It brings a bit of "modernity" over spamgourmet though. Now that spamgourmet might stop working as the founder got a cancer :(<https://bbs.spamgourmet.com/viewtopic.php?f=5&t=1766&sid=2506a90fa5b1d53b58adbf99f1b5f98f> , I hope SimpleLogin could be an alternative to spamgourmet.
