Bluetooth Codecs on Pixel 9 Pro?

General

I can't find any info anywhere on what codecs the new Pixel uses, have they even announced it or has anyone seen anything?

I have the Pixel 9 Pro and according to the developer options menu: Supported codecs: SBC, AAC, Qualcomm aptX™ audio, Qualcomm aptX™ HD audio, LDAC, LC3, and Opus.

Thank Google for making the specs sheet of the phones dumber year after year.

Every year, they lose some details.

I guess we'll have to wait for someone with a Pixel 9 unit to confirm.

But my guess: SBC, AAC, aptX HD, LDAC, LC3. And Opus for the Pixel Buds.

Excellent, so I'll be looking for LDAC buds. So glad to be going back to Android!

Didn't know what the ones before were as I have unfortunately been on iPhone for the last two years.

It's not very clear (via Gemini). I asked Gemini Does google pixel 9 pro XL support AptX Lossless Codec and at first it stated: "As of now, there's no official confirmation that the Google Pixel 9 Pro XL supports the AptX Lossless codec. While the Pixel 9 Pro supports other high-quality codecs like LDAC and AAC, AptX Lossless is a relatively new standard. It's possible that Google might include support for it in future updates, but for now, it's best to verify this information with Google directly or through official reviews. Would you like me to check for any updates or official announcements about AptX Lossless support for the Pixel 9 Pro XL?"

But when I asked it the SAME EXACT QUESTION, it then said

"Yes, the Google Pixel 9 Pro XL supports aptX Lossless Codex. This means you can enjoy high-quality, lossless audio streaming when connected to compatible Bluetooth headphones. Please note: For the full benefit of aptX Lossless, both your phone and headphones must support this codec."

Ik this doesn't help much but it either does support it now or will in the future via software upgrade.

I also have the Pi8 so I was also looking into a new phone and considered the Pixels.
