Good & maintained alternative WebUIs?

So I've been on the market for an alternative WebUI for some time now, as the lacking dark mode makes my eyes bleed. Are there any that actually work, are maintained and don't try to reinvent the wheel just to fail miserably?

Dracula simply doesn't work, the issue is almost a year old, the project might not even be maintained anymore.

VueTorrent, after getting it to work (my fault), looks nice but has quite the strange workflow and some confusing settings.

qbit-matUI looks good, but published its latest release over a year ago, so I didn't try it, as I suppose it to be abandoned.

DarkLight, which appears to be a simple dark mode port of the original WebUI. It's bland like the original, but at least it doesn't make things confusing in the name of eye candy.

VuTorrent has been great, not sure if you maybe disabled the login page for local ip range. Otherwise it will show the login page and you can't do anything after that.

Dark mode works great too with vue

VueTorrent is my favorite because it has the best mobile UI and I primarily check qBit from my phone.

VueTorrent is a dumpster fire if you have more than like 15 torrents in your client. And the search/filter is absolute garbage. It looks great and actually has a functional mobile version, but other than that, it's not really functional.

Nice, going to try this one out, very similar to the original (like DarkLight, but arguably better implemented).
