GUIDE: Setting up ZeroTier with Plex Media Server on Windows, or a way to deal with CGNAT

Tips

The setup:

This is a guide for setting up

- ZeroTier
- on a Windows computer
- that's running Plex Media Server
- to connect other devices to said PMS remotely
- to solve remote connection issues

my friend told me about ZeroTier when i was setting up my server this year. it is so much easier than dealing with ports never opening correctly. there is even an iOS app that works perfectly with the Plex Dash app.

I've been using this setup for years, sadly there is no possible way to make it work with Samsung TVs running Tizen. TVs running android can still sideload the apk.

Connect the TV to a router that supports ZT (I use a travel router, slate model from gli.net) it's the only way around with "dumb" systems.

This is how I have my setup working, I was using tails ale, but I was finding there where a lot of dropouts and slow downs, ZeroTier has worked a lot better for me

Great alternative!

I setup a cloud server on hetzner for 4.81 euro then used Netbird to connect it to my home. Then I could close all ports in my home router and have reverse proxy on the cloudserver pointing to all my services =)

Just use Tailscale

I know this is a year old thread, but I was trying to work on TrueNAS scale connecting to ZeroTier. But apparently I kept getting the error "Startup probe failed: unknown network ID, check that you are a member of the network" when my zerotier is set to private. Should I just leave it to Public?
