What do the relay servers do?

Some comments around Reddit have made me question if I understand how Rustdesk works. My understanding is that the relay servers are only used to establish connections between clients. Once the clients are connected that the actual session data is transmitted peer to peer between the two clients and if the two clients are on the same network just over the LAN.

Some have suggested the session data is bounced off the relay server the whole time. So, which is it? Not that it particularly matters long as everything is end-to-end encrypted, just want to make sure I correctly understand how Rustdesk works.
