Install Windows 11 22H2

Seems that Microsoft has made it more difficult to not create a Windows account when there's no Internet during initial install.

This creates issues for Proxmox installing Windows 11 if you pick the VirtIO network device.

Here's a way around that. When you get to the "Let's Connect You To The Network" screen and the next button stays disabled unless you connect, do the following.

- Press SHIFT-F10 to bring up a cmd window
- Press Win key + E to bring up an explorer window

Now you have an explorer window open, you can install all the drivers needed off the driver ISO you previously mounted as per https://pve.proxmox.com/wiki/Windows_10_guest_best_practices

Another trick I just found out last week, in the user box type "no@thankyou.com" and any password. It'll error out when trying to login and let you click next to create a local account. Dev bypass must be 🤪

Also works on Win10 surprisingly which means it's programmed into their login script on their page.

Nice. Right now I'm just testing some Intune deployment scenarios so I'm wanting to log in with someone's 365 credentials, but that's good to know. Thanks!

Ah, this is interesting. Did I just run into MS dev giving away Christmas goodies? 😊😅

There's also audit mode which you access by pressing CTRL+SHIFT+F3 during the OOB.

Basically Windows will reboot and log itself into an administrator account so you can install whatever.

I've used it a few times when building PCs for family members, but your way is definitely faster for just the QEMU drivers.

Whilst on the account login screen, indeed press Shift+F10, but at the command prompt type

oobe\bypassnro

The out-of-box-experience will relaunch with the option to skip. No need to mess around.

Interesting. I did the load drivers but it only showed me the disk driver ones. Once I chose that one, if I hit it again it again only showed disk drivers. Anyway, once I get to the network fail thing, I just go ahead and run the guest install program on the ISO and it will install all the other drivers with it.

Choose setup as work account + choose domain setup. The account it first creates is a local account. (I did this as of last week)

In my case, Win+E did not work, but I knew I could just execute 'explorer.exe' in the terminal, and it was good to go. I'm just commenting in case anyone else has the same problem.

Then you just need to find the driver, select the file that appears with no extension, and right-click. It should have the option "Install." If it does, installed it and it's done.
