HoahMasterrace

Trying to set up auto login for Debian 12 server.

I need to auto login with tty and found this forum post but when I tried to save with vim it said it didn't exist which I though was strange so I exited vim and checked. I found my Debian 12 minimal system does not have a getty@service.d directory.

I then created one and the override.conf but when I restarted the auto login did not work. I searched on other ways to do this but found no other way. Help thanks.

Worried about costs? Switching from MagicINFO to Samsung VXT was smooth and secure — and it cut expenses while keeping things efficient.

That post is from * 9 years ago * and goes back almost five OS release levels. Why did you think that information would even be remotely accurate?

..nvm..

Before we tell you the how, can we ask you the why? There might be a very simple and effective way that solves the problem you're having, without going down the route you're going?

Here's a link from 3 years ago that someone else asked the same question, and a couple other people popped up...mirroring my concerns.
