FYI Post. 2 weeks with a Stundenglass

Let me start this by saying I'm not affiliated to anyone or any services and these are my own opinions.

Straight out the box this piece has the nicest build quality, that I have ever seen, not only with smokewares, but generally speaking as well. Overall, the unbox quality and feel, 10/10.

Lets get into using it..

In a full size one, it typically takes about 3 rotations for me to finish a bowl. I Haven't had any leakage issues, tar issues, or anything like that, granted I keep my equipment clean regardless, and clean it every 2-3 days.

The smoke it produces is closer to a vapor, and is a lot less harsh when compared to a traditional bong. However... for a piece that costs so much, I would expect it to be BETTER than a traditional bong in MOST if not ALL aspects. However, I found that the taste in the stundenglass is very stale when in comparison to a normal glass bong, which

I have to completely agree, I love mine, and I tried to make it a daily piece, but it's a chore and took the fun out of it, not it's more of a long weekend/show piece, everyone wants to try it (which I don't mind).

So is it worth it? For me ... absolutely !!!

party piece. For the price I found it on SmokeDay.com for $360 and they are authorized retailers for stundenglass hookahs. That means they are authentic products.

Thank you for that review. I'm on the fence about this one. Even to the point of trying out ordering from China for a cheaper conversation piece. I vape, so I hope it doesn't cause my vapor to taste weaker. Thanx again.

Oh boy, I have a mighty on the side, and the taste difference between the mighty and a normal bong is already incomparable to say the least

I get the feeling Stundenglass has been sold as they are now shipping direct from the Chinese manufacturer. If so the QA is expected to drop in my opinion.

I can get a legit one for pretty cheap at the moment, and I'm just starting to smoke flower again (still mostly prefer extracts) but I don't plan using this daily. Just when I have a sesh with friends and housemates every now and then. I would never do it for 499 though. I can justify high prices (maybe not that high) for erigs or solid rig set up with a good thermometer and all that.

My wife got me one for my birthday and it's my daily driver. I have to give it a quick clean (empty water, fill a bit with some iso, rotate a lot, rinse) every 2 days and I try to do a deeper clean every week. I have one of the GRAV Phoenix ash catchers and that keeps debris out of my Stundenglass so it's easier to keep clean.

I ended up getting a GRAV deco beaker to use so I could reduce usage of my Stundenglass so I wouldn't have to clean it as frequently, but I can't get over the wallop that the Stundenglass packs so I haven't been able to stop using it.

It's just super expensive. I probably wouldn't have bought one for myself. And even with how much I love it, not sure I would buy one full price for myself. Just a lot of money compared to a normal bong, even if it's not the same thing.
