Anyone try a Grav glycerin chiller with their hydro/none? I was thinking about the smaller one pictured here to take direct hits by attaching a hot and ready dynavap on the 14mm end to cool the draw.

A little pricey at $40 for the small piece but if can cool a session even just a bit by extending the draw path and chilling it with the glycerin then I would entertain the purchase. What do you all think?

If you're up for the wait, I have one of these and have bought several for friends. Everyone loves them and they are super portable. Not sure if it's in the same boat but definitely cheaper.

I suggest using a water pipe with a vertical 14mm female adapter to mount the 14mm coil, then using a nona or hydrovong above it.

The straight-shot style adapter pictured never seemed like it would get enough surface area cooling to do much beyond chilling your hand a little.
