What if Season 3 of Saga of Tanya just appeared on crunchyroll with 24 episodes and another movie on the way?

Would be weird since we didn't even have season 2 yet.

It wouldn't, the target audience for Japanese companies is usually Japanese people so they wouldn't randomly shadow drop it on a foreign streaming service, they'd run it on TV like every other show.

Considering season two has been stuck on episode 1 for 3 years, I'd say it's a stretch.
