[Solo Leveling] Question about Sung Jinwoo's stats

Discussion

Strength is obvious, and so does sense and agility. But what about vitality and intelligence? Does vitality help him survive otherwise fatal injuries and/or increase his rate or recovery?

What about intelligence? He mentioned that it has something to do with magic/mana consumption or smth, is it really just that, does it also make him smarter? I've only read till the first red gate where he resurrected Iron, then stopped and watched the anime.

Unless it actually makes him smarter or improve his rate of learning/comprehending, I think calling it "intelligence" is kind of a misnomer and confusing. Tho I guess that it's kinda based off of DnD and how sorcerers use intelligence as their stat?

Vit = more health, tankier.

Int = more mana and better spells.

Let's just say that if you want to understand Jinwoo's "system" you kinda have to spoil yourself about the story as depicted in the source material. Then it makes more sense why it is the way it is.

Though to put it simply - don't pay it any real attention. It doesn't really matter.

Strength gives him a boost to all physical capabilities, including speed.

Agility deals with his reaction time and basically bends his perception of time

Vitality was shown in his fight with Beru, as he just takes the punch to the face without flinching, it's his ability to take a punch and the total damage he can withhold

Intelligence doesn't impact intelligence, funnily enough, it's only boost to his mana/ability output, and IIRC also affects cooldowns.

Well the term intelligence in itself is already kind of a misnomer to begin with, since we tend to use it interchangeably with IQ. But when people say intelligent or smart they generally don't mean IQ, but a generally wise and experienced person.

What IQ measures is a general ability to keep track of multiple concepts in your head at the same time and apply them. So in this setting it would make sense for him to have some higher intelligence in order to control/keep track of all his minions.

So yeah, it kinda makes sense that intelligence in this system would be more for mana pool and mana efficiency, and max capacity for spells or skills, just like in stuff like d&d, and not a direct increase in someone's IQ. Which would be hard to portray in a show like this anyway, because high IQ doesn't at all manifest in behavior that is easy to observe. He could have vastly higher IQ than he did before, but that's kinda hard to portray to the audience

Is solo leveling worth watching?

It's only one of the most popular and highest rated anime in recent years, following a very popular source material.

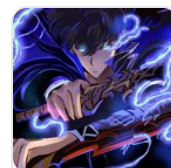

So yeah. It's worth watching. At least if you enjoy battle anime. It has superb visuals. Not much other than great action, but with production values like those, it doesn't need more.
