Honestly even with an extra five or ten seconds this DPS Check would be considered ridiculous on normal mode. You basically can't get hit once by the beams or mess up a burst combo once. You HAVE to be perfect. It's ridiculous even at a level better than 55.

Also having to watch the Tsunami animation every time you fail adds an extra 30 seconds to a minute of doing nothing before a game over. Great design there.

I started this dlc in ff mode and the dps check is making me want to throw my controller. It doesn't matter if I do every perfect he always has a tiny scrap of meter left and I die. Kinda hate this.

Wildfire works if you spam it and run directly away and off to the side of the waterspout ASAP

Gotta make sure you don't get too close because it can and will pull you in

The fact that I would always fail near the end of the bar is what makes it the most infuriating. Happy that people are still finding enjoyment out of it but it honestly ruined the experience for me.

Which is a shame.

DPS check is the point I can't get past. And I avoid all his attacks and still can't do enough damage.

Im playing on my NG+ Final Fantasy mode one and it is the toughest fight in the game so far, this is some counters i found. For Maelstrom jump then dodge then wildfire in the air , for Waterspout immediately wild fire away diagonally backwards and keep going until youre clear, and The DPS check start immediately with Fire breath thingy and try and close the distance (honestly think i got lucky) tough fight that requires almost perfect play with a lot of fail states. hope this helps!

impossible to dodge. It's stupid. I understand the dev team responding to ppl saying the game is too easy but this is the absolute worst way to make a boss difficult. BS damage, zero margin for error fail states and near impossible to dodge attacks is lazy game design. Not since ninja gaiden sigma 2 have I experienced arbitrary difficulty spikes this poor.

It was harder than I expected, for sure. But I enjoyed it. The DPS check phase was tight. I failed that a couple of times tbh. The last phase was wild and tense too, I loved it. It didnt really feel like a bs fight to me
