It's confirmed that there will be no save transfer between games in KCD II, but how would Warhorse handle the unique items from 1st game? Would be neat to have Stephanie's shirt in inventory yeah and hes locked up for like 1-2 months and that explains why his skills are mostly gone. Pretty easy way for them to start the game

The whole game he's like "WHERE'S MY FATHERS SWORD? And where are my 12 swords? And my 3 suits of armour? And my horse? And my 126k groschen?"

I don't think Henery would take that stuff with him but Like the other person says I'm pretty sure it's been confirmed by Warhorse that Henry gets abducted or beaten on the road and loses all his stuff early on in the prologue. It would be the best way to explain why Henry needs to get more gear and to get better at fighting without giving him amnesia or something stupid like that.

Why people even think Gear Transfer is a thing? It isn't in most Games.

Hey, you. You're finally awake. You were trying to cross the border, right? Walked right into that Imperial ambush, same as us, and that thief over there.

maybe like Witcher 3 did? have some interview style questions asked to Henry to find out what he did in the past

To be fair, pretty much all of those items that Henry canonically most likely did not do. This was talked about too much, but the main story is extremely urgent and happens entirely in one summer. Highly doubt Ulrich gave a message for Henry to deliver, but he spent 2 weeks grocery shopping for lady stephanie, chasing robber barons and heretics and only then did he come back.

And to top it all off, not only does it make no sense for him to have all that stuff, most of these quest rewards are one of the best item in the game for that category, It'd be extremely boring to start the game in lord of lepia full plate with a saint george sword at level 20, never got why some people wanted all that.

I will admit thought, having Hans Capon's Bow at the beginning of the game with Hans saying "You still have my old piece of crap?" in a tutorial quest would be a cool nod!
