Haeffound

My small contribution to this sub, my new Fiio FT1, with the Meze boom mic!

Show & Tell

I love the style of the headphone, the metallic feel of the mic is smooth and great too. I added the headband from Capra for an even better feeling on the head.

After search for a good time to replace my current aging headset, and help from people in r/headphoneadvice, I choose the Fiio FT1 as my first good headphone. Since I need to have a microphone, I went with the Meze Boom Mic which sound great! I only used it for a day, but I like a lot the closed design and wood which goes well with my desk.

I don't regret the investment, next step may be an amp/DAC... Down the rabbit hole I go?

How does the mic quality hold up? Good enough for VOIP calls?

Haeffound OP • 7mo ago

It's not good enough, it's very very excellent!

Fiio makes a decent DAC amp, K11. Would work nicely with the 4.4 balanced cable from the FT1

I would loose the meeze boom mic. I search an aq̄p/duc with 2 entry because I have 2 PCs, including a laptop (so USB on trrs).

I got my FT1 just before the strike but unfortunately the FT1pro has been stuck on "released from customs" for a while.

The taxes and shipping is so expensive for this stuff, but would do again I suppose. Time will tell.

Between the wooden cups and the metal finishes, it looks very heavy. How is the fatigue during long sessions? I have a pair of DT 770 Pro X LEs and am considering comparing them to the FiiOS...

Dumb question but does it matter which way the 3 slots in the aluminum cover on the mic face? Mine points to the outside instead of towards my mouth. I can twist it so the slots are facing me, but it eventually turns back out.

Sorry for the late comment, but i read of different people having the mic sound very quiet. Did you have any problem with that? Did you connect the cable directly on the motherboard?
