Can I keep all the companions in poe2?

Hi,

I use both Pellegina and Maia in my party, and all other characters are on like 5th level (the main part on 20th). I by mistake sided with VTC - and Maia left. Then I tried siding with Pirates - got letter from Pellegina that she left. Is there a way to keep both of those companions? I would rather not use "pseudo characters" for whatever game is left. Thanks in advance.

If you stay independent, no one will leave. You don't need to ally with anyone to progress.

There's the wild card ending but that has some subpar outcomes in the ending slides.

I haven't tried it yet so i can't really verify, but I have read people have used a kind of work around. If you get to the last conversation to commit to a faction (i.e. End choice spoiler) then turn them down, the faction will become hostile but your companion (if you have very positive relationship) may side with you in the fight. If you do this to the target of you desired faction to ally with, then you won't be asked to do the morally questionable final quest (i.e. End choice spoiler)

Party xp is a thing. Even if you never use a companion, they stay within a few levels of the main character. You're basically in the endgame, so I would just accept the consequences and finish the game.

Crazy that there was a solid hint of foreshadowing in POE1 before POE2 was even in production
