Really strange issue when connecting to TV via HDMI - M1 Pro MBP 16"

I'm gonna get right into it So, i plug the HDMI in the TV and the laptop. The content plays and sound comes out of the laptop speaker, don't worry, the issue isn't that simple.

When I switch to the TV as the sound output, whatever media I have playing starts scrubbing forward, as in video timeline moves. Tested on YouTube and F1 TV. EDIT: Spotify's player seems a bit more resilient, however it does also glitch, almost like something is continuously being pulled forward but Spotify won't let it, resulting in weird audio skipping and glitching. The sound plays for about half a second then cuts out.

I have tried all the different HDMI ports, and 2 different HDMI cables that I know work from other devices. As well as running the HDMI through a USB-C to HDMI dongle.

Pulling my hair out here.

TV is a Sony Bravia KD-46EX650 if that's relevant. I've disabled "HDMI Control" on my TV, but to no avail. I've

My temporary fix is plug in HDMI cable, change the sound output to TV in system preferences, restart your Mac then it should work perfectly fine with video and sound playing without any hiccups.

Edit #1: Every new MacBook I got and tested after I returned my first one in November never had any problems with video and sound hiccups via HDMI right out the box. No updates were applied and they were on monterey 12.0.1. Would recommend you contact apple support for an official fix. If the problem persists, ask for a repair or exchange even if it's outside the return window.

Years later this is still a problem. Thank goodness for your post, the restart solution works (albeit annoying)

You da man(still)!

I logged in just to respond and say THANK YOU because this is what saved me on my holidays when trying to play mkv via HDMI connected to usb-c hub. Only after I restarted the audio stuttering was gone.

THANK YOU!!

wanted to add to the conversation, I was on Monterey and have since updated to Ventura. This fixed the problem, but only temporarily. It has since returned. (as of dec. 22 2022 with no system updates available)

Looking up SMC reset as per comments. Restarting every time I connect to my monitor sounds like an infuriating workaround for such an expensive device.

Update:

Still haven't tried the SMC reset, but when Audio Output is set to a speaker (Not the monitor) video playback is normal. I didn't try using the built in speakers but I assume that would work as well.
