City Colleges of Chicago is great, I got my associates there. One advice though, make your main college that you take classes from a college that specializes in your major. For example, Malcolm X is good for nursing majors, Wilbur Wright for engineers, Harold Washington for business, and so on for each college. I went to Harold Washington for most of my classes, then when I took a CIS class at Wilbur Wright for my last semester, I wish I went there instead lol (it was a better cs community).

I'm sure there's plenty, it's just a matter of doing research. There's the city colleges if you're a Chicago resident, MVCC in the south suburbs, CoD in the western suburbs, and Harper College in the North.
