Razer Huntmans V2 Analog, is there a way to turn off controller recognition so it is seen only as a keyboard?

Question

For example, in rust when I press enter to chat it pulls up the rust website in a chrome tab because supposedly that button is mapped somehow on a controller. There are a few games that have troubles and I can't seem to switch the mode from a game controller to being recognized as a regular keyboard.

Looks like a user error to me. Check your bindings in Synapse and within the game.

The only binding in synapse is whether or not you want wasd swapped to an analog stick control. This option is off, and no matter what is changed the keyboard is recognized as a controller. I've even set it to the second priority on the steam controller config.

1. Go to Control Panel
2. Devices and Printers
3. Double-click on "Razer Huntsman V2 Analog"
4. Go to the Hardware tab
5. Double-click on "HID-compliant game controller"
6. Click on "Change settings"
7. Go to the "Driver Tab"
8. Click on "Disable Device"

This will disable the in-game controller from the keyboard (WASD act like a joystick, for example). I never used this feature and think I never will lol so I don't mind having it disabled tbh.
