modded youtube for apple TV?

Question

I have been using YTLite plus after migrating from UYou+ on my phone and absolutely love sponsorblock. I already have YT premium so sponsor blocking is the only feature I needed. Is there a documented way to add sponsorblock to the youtube app on apple tv?

There is something in development called ReactTube. <https://github.com/Duell10111/ReactTube> For now no .ipa (hope it will come)

I did a bit of research and I think your only option is to install Yattee

I went this route for a few months (both iOS and tvOS) before abandoning it. Here's some notes and observations from my experience:

Yattee is a front-end, so it requires a source of sorts. It does not connect directly to YouTube's servers. I went the route of self-hosting an Invidious instance in Docker.

Here, the problems begin:

- Yattee has been playing videos with the wrong (usually auto-generated) language track instead of the primary one (Issue #852). This is likely related to Invidious (Issue #2007)
- Yattee experiences issues when using the MPV renderer where videos won't load (Issue #842). AVPlayer is limited to 720p
- Yattee release branch (App Store) receives updates quite slowly, and the TestFlight beta has limited slots
- You can't cast to Yattee
- Invidious frequently breaks due to changes on YouTube's side (Issue #4947). Although the issues are always resolved, you can expect 2-3 days of downtime before the fix makes it into the release image
- Invidious (if self-hosted) will require a computer which is always on
- Invidious needs to be updated frequently, so if you're running it in a Docker container you should setup something like watchtower to handle this
- Publicly available Invidious instances are very limited now after YouTube implemented some changes to crackdown on them
- You'll need to manually import your subscriptions to your Invidious account (via. Google Takeout) - this doesn't auto-update or sync with your YouTube account so you'll need to handle changes one-by-one

Don't get me wrong, Yattee (and Invidious) are the best alternatives we currently have. I'm incredibly thankful to the devs for the hard work they do in even producing a solution that we can use. I just felt it was necessary to provide these caveats so people are aware of what they're getting in to (especially if they come across this comment chain via. search).
