Unpopular opinion: Maybelline Fit Me Concealer isn't worth the hype

[Makeup Help]

I've seen to many rave reviews about this concealer but I don't get that hype.

Maybe I bought a bad batch, I don't know:

I experienced low coverage with this, you can't add more layers to get more coverage and it's too thin.

Do only people who have clear skin rate it good?

A concealer is something which should conceal and doesn't vanish. :/

This concealer is pure junk to me. I think they just make money off the word "dupe". That concealer wore off after about a minute.

My experience with concealer is it looks good for an hour and then just fades off (I tried premium ones like Nars, Tarte, Dior)

I have a similar experience although Tarte does last for a solid 6 hours without touch-ups! Also, I can't use concealer alone as it will NEVER match my skin tone. I wonder if I'm the only one having this problem as so many seem to just use concealer + some bronzer before they're ready to go

I love the nyx don't stop won't stop and revolution conceal and define I find they both offer good coverage and I only need to use a little bit to conceal any red patches or spots

They did the thing with this one where they packaged it really similarly to a super popular product (Nars Radiant Creamy Concealer), and rode that product's coattails to the bank.

I never liked the Age Rewind one either and that's been recommended all over the place for years.

disappointed because I had heard so many great things about it. Maybe it works better for people with already clear skin? But I totally agree, a concealer should actually conceal, not just disappear into thin air.

I agree. The wand is TINY and it doesn't cover anything. I just use mine as eyeshadow primer

Have you found a concealer that you like? I am looking myself and fit me has been the only somewhat decent one. I got the glossier one which is supposed to be super hydrating but even fit me worked better, so I have no idea what to try now for pimples/acne/scars etc.:

- MAC Pro Longwear Concealer (sets itself without powder, medium to full coverage, my HG for years)
- Tarte Shape Tape Concealer (good for oily skin, doesn't need powder for setting because it sets itself, high coverage)
- Dermacol Makeup Cover (tiny amount covers everything, creamy consistency, highest coverage) for undereye area (mine is dry and I have dark circles + fine lines):

- MAC Pro Longwear Concealer (but I don't use powder to set it under my eyes)
- Tarte Shape Tape Creamy Concealer (hydrating, more natural version of Shape Tape Concealer)
- Dermacol Makeup Cover (does crease but only if use the usual amount for concealer)

A trick I heard from a YouTuber (Taylor Wynn) is to apply it, then let it sit for a bit before blending it out, for more coverage. I find this works with many thinner concealers. I personally don't like the FitMe concealer as I can't find the best shade match, but the trick does help.

it's not the greatest but i'm too lazy to take the time to find a better one that matches my skin so i still use it 🤖

Fr, all other concealers in my drugstore are either pink or orange. The fit me one is yellow enough for my banana looking skin
