Best setting powder for dark skin?

Question

I am finally ready to stick a big toe into the world of baking. I have a lot of setting powder that was gifted to me by an old resident but I am pretty sure they are for pale- lighter skin. What would you recommend I use? Also, what do you prefer as an applicator. Brush, powder puff or blender? Thanksss 🍷

-Maybelline fit me setting powder Q -Yardley loose powder Q -makeup revolution baking powder -essence banana powder (might be too light so only use for brighting under eyes) -LA girl pro powder

For application it depends what look you are looking for

For a full Matte look: beauty blender and brush off with a brush a few minutes later

Airbrush/less matte: powder puff but dab off the excess

I love Laura Mercier Q (black top). I just added the Givenchy for deeper skin in my cart for the FAFO sale at Sephora. I put the mini size. Also, Beauty Bakerie Q has a good powder and it's inexpensive. I think the main thing is what's your skin type? Cause not all powders are created equally. I'm combo dry and those the powders that work for me. Fenty's loose powder in banana is also a fav of mine

I have oily (brown) skin and I really like Tatcha! Expensive but worth it!

maybeline it the loose powder has been my go to for years! their pressed powder is also great and has a wider shade range, it also has a little bit more pigment

I like morphe banana powered. But Clinique also has nice power for darker completions!

I've heard great things about KimChi beauty! Although I do not have dark skin their setting powder is absolutely amazing and holds my makeup all day.
