Dermablend?

Question

Hi! I'm getting married this fall, and I have a few tattoos I want to cover. (Most I love, but I have a few that I don't). I've been hearing good things about dermablend, but for the one on my arm, would it smudge on my dress? Or are there are any recommended ways to set it to make it last? Or are there any other products you recommend? Tia!

Okay, thank you! I saw some reviews say it doesn't transfer, but that sounded far fetched to me.

If not, you could consider a fabric tattoo cover for your arm one. They are like stretchy fabric sleeves. You have time between now and the wedding to try a few to find a good color match for your skin. If it bothers you to wear something that resembles a bandage, you could cover it with a lace that complements your dress, or even with some fabric saved from the alteration process so it's an exact match to your dress.

Fourth option--rock some long opera gloves 🕶️

On an average day, I don't really think about them. I've 100% considered getting the one on my arm covered up! Would be great for work too since I work in a very professional setting. I think I'm just nervous about making it worse.

A fun sleeve idea could be cute though! Especially for October!

Okay, this is gonna sound really weird, but my uncle is getting married in October, and I saw a previous post on your profile in r/Minneapolis. My uncle lives in Minnesota 😊 maybe add removable sleeves to your dress somehow?

I did NOT experience any transfer with Dermablend on a gold dress - I experimented for weeks beforehand. Careful application- let it dry and it covered the tattoo with no issues.
